(CHICAGO) January 15, 2008 – Grenzebach Glier and Associates, the leading international fundraising consultancy, has appointed Glen Fendley as Chief Executive in Europe.

“Glen is a strategic thinker, a very successful fundraising executive, and a dynamic business leader with a good understanding of the fundraising opportunities and challenges in the UK and Europe,” said John J. Glier, President and Chief Executive Officer of GG+A. “We are delighted he has joined our firm.”

Fendley is an international consultant and professional fundraiser with more than 10 years’ success in large-scale initiatives and challenging not-for-profit environments. He has provided counsel on strategic planning, campaign readiness, major gift fundraising, board development and staff training to a wide range of organizations and institutions in Denmark, Ireland, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Previously, as head of his own consulting firm, GF Consulting/3rd Solutions, Glen worked with senior development professionals, chief executives, board leaders and new philanthropists. His clients included: Royal Society of Wildlife Trusts, the University of Kent in Canterbury, Action Medical Research, Strathclyde University (CADISPA), Roy Castle Lung Cancer Foundation, The Woodland Trust, Duke of Edinburgh International Awards Scheme and the Big Issue Foundation, among others. He was instrumental in securing six- and seven-figure gifts for a number of clients.

“I am looking forward to being part of this exceptional team of international professionals who are so deeply committed to providing first class service to their impressive range of clients,” Fendley said. “At a time of increasing competition for charitable grants and donations, I want to ensure that GG+A’s operations in the UK and Europe continue to deliver the very highest standards in strategic and philanthropic expertise, and that we maximize our collective skills and experiences to help a greater number of organizations achieve their challenging campaign and fundraising objectives.”

Fendley has served as Campaign Director for Pestalozzi International Village. Previous positions include Director of Development for the Marine Stewardship Council; Head of Trusts and Major Support for WWF-UK (World Wildlife Fund); and Head of Major Donors for The Children’s Society, one of the UK’s largest children’s charities.

Glen is co-author of the Institute of Fundraising’s Major Gift Fundraising Code of Practice and a frequent speaker at many professional conferences and events. In the UK, he is a member of the Institute of Fundraising; Researchers in Fundraising Group; Major Donor Managers Group; and the Institute of Direct Marketing.

He has a baccalaureate degree in Management Studies from the University of Aston, and lives in the UK with his family.
